There was once a little raindrop that lived in the sky. She lived a very blissful life as she was always on top. Her days went by perfectly and everything was great.

One day, she slipped from her cloud and began falling from her cloud. She spent a long time alone as there was nothing in sight.

As she was falling, she met different clouds of various shades and shapes. Each one was unique and she found that interesting. They all greeted her but she could not reply for she was still in shock.

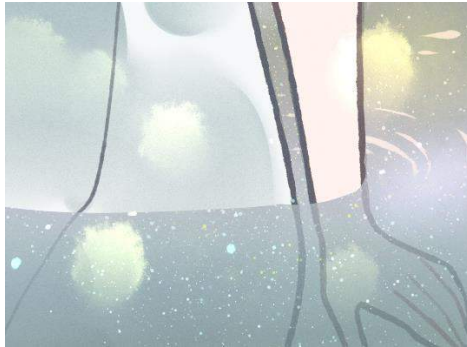

After quite some time, she soon landed on a leaf. She looked up and noticed how far away her cloud was. Not knowing how to get back home, she panicked. This caused her to slip from the leaf.

She fell down once more and landed on a puddle. The thought of being away from home scared her, and so she cried. Her tears streamed with no signs of stopping.

Time passed and her sobbing stopped. She looked up at the sky and saw a sight so beautiful that she was at loss for words. The stars decorated the sky, twinkling brightly and illuminating the night. Fireflies appeared and glowed around her, flying happily.

She calmed down and thought. She knew that wallowing in sorrow was not going to help her get back up. Her eyes closed and she took a deep breath. Her body slowly began mixing with the puddle water.

The place she thought was the bottom was actually not. The puddle helped her up and she slowly began ascending. Her body floated and she soared in the sky. Once again, she met the clouds and this time, she greeted them with a smile. The land which she was afraid of falling into was breathtaking when seen from above. She soared in the sky and soon reached back to her cloud, back to her home.
